Andy has been in education and training for over 25 years, working across all age ranges and in all types of education settings. He is relational in his approach and fundamentally believes that if the relationship is right then serious development, growth and change can happen. Andy thrives on a stage in front of a room of students, teachers, staff or parents.

Andy is a highly experienced individual who transfers and shares his knowledge through the mediums of training, facilitation and coaching. He is adept at engaging with all audiences. He has worked within and across many education and training environments, and engages and encourages those around him through his high levels of energy, drive and enthusiasm.

He loves life and all that it offers. Andy is husband to an amazing wife, Emma, and Dad to two brilliant teenagers, Eve and Noah. They always look forward to family time together, mostly by some water somewhere.
